The Great Inflatable Race Addresses Concerns Over Unauthorized Card Activity

FundRacer Events LLC (DBA The Great Inflatable Race) today confirmed that it has received reports of unauthorized activity on payment accounts after registering for events. These reports are for fraudulent transactions not associated with The Great Inflatable Race, but appear to have occurred after registering for the event. This issue seems to have potentially impacted a limited number of registrants.

FundRacer Events is working closely with financial institutions, registration software, and online security providers to ensure that any issues are resolved. All payment processing of registrations is done directly through Braintree, a PayPal Service. At no point does FundRacer Events, The Great Inflatable Race, or Register My Race, store participants financial data.

“Our commitment is to ensure the financial data of our clients is secure through all phases of the transaction. This commitment is of paramount importance to us,” says FundRacer CEO, Ken Richardson. “We have ensured our encryption certificates are working properly, and we have been in direct communication with registrants who have reported concerns.”

FundRacer Events takes all potential threats to the security of the customer’s information very seriously. They encourage anyone who feels like they may be a victim of fraud to reach out with any relevant information to their financial institution and to The Great Inflatable Race.
